Illinois was the aim today of a conference called by Gov. Otto Kerner to study the investigation board. the area's economic problems.

More than 300 leaders of government, business, labor and education met in a series of workshops to discuss the problems of unemployment and declining

Conferees, meeting at Southern Illinois University, covered a wide range of proposed public works projects including a $300 million barge canal on the Big Muddy River which would connect Southern Illinois coal mines with the Mississippi River.

Other discussion groups dealt with such topics as coordination of state industrial planning, highway building, water, labor, government and private financing, attracting tourists and small town redevelopment.

Kerner plans to study workshop reports for use in his conferenceclosing speech Saturday, to which he has invited all residents of Southern Illinois.

His address, on the SIU campus, will be a blueprint for area progress with ideas to counteract the decreasing importance of small farming and coal mining, once major occupations.

The governor set the conference keynote Thursday night with an address in Herrin before the

True Tragedy Of Lumumba

The new chaos in the Congo, following upon the death of Patrice Lumumba, gives the world's responsible leaders one of the worst dilemmas they have faced in this century.

It is enough of a problem simply to try to set any struggling young nation on a sound course. The difficulty is multiplied incredibly when the new country is so torn apart and so ill prepared for self-government as is the Congo.

As if that were not sufficient, the Russian Communists have seen in this situation a golden chance to build a broad beachhead in Africa. So they have converted the Congo's steaming jungles into a cold war arena.

Lumumba's death at the hands of Katanga tribesmen compounds the confusion. Civil war would be a danger even if all outsiders were in complete accord in efforts to induce peace. With Soviet agitation, done in the name of "justice," the peril is far greater.

Undoubtedly Lumumba will now be made a martyr by his followers. It goes without saying that it would have been much better for him to have had a fair trial in a reasonably calm atmosphere.

But his passing is no loss to the cause of good government as such. As his country's first leader he was a total failure. He spawned chaos. And when he could not cope with his problems he invited Soviet technicians to help him, which is like asking the devil to help put out a fire.

Whether the U.N. can find a solution, whether it will be permitted by the obstructing Soviet Union to try to effect one, these are now the grave questions before the world.

With native hatreds unleashed anew by this tragic death, the situation may already be unmanageable.

If, however, genuine order can still be established then responsible leaders should move with all speed to achieve it. And they should let the world understand, in ringing terms, that the Kremlin will bear the blame for any major outside interference with that ob-

When Lumumba was killed, Moscow lost its servant in the Congo. Should it now, in revenge, help to foment civil war, no decent man anywhere on earth should be unaware.

In its agony of overpopulation, poverty and widespread disorder the world has desperate need for constructive progress. It cannot afford illusions about men, like those in Moscow or Peiping, who traffic in these ills to advance the spread of their stifling approach. He got some action. They're not calling it the sack (and to make it a little less sacklike they have taken in the seams a bit). But a sack by any other name is still a sack.

In fact, to keep from calling a sack a sack the designers and fashon writers are digging around in their dictionaries to come up with It was thought that Kennedy's all kinds of descriptive phrases, such as "the fluid look," "relaxed extremely broad use of television silhouette," "the easy look," "simple, straight and loose." But maybe this time we can play a sneaky trick on the designers.

Bring Your Will Up-To-Date

Jim Duewer and Oz Elliott review tax rulings affecting estates.

When was the last time you took your will from your Safe Deposit box to see if it is still up-todate? Was it last month . . . last year . . . five years ago? Many changes occur in our families and businesses as time goes by . . . and many changes take place in the tax laws and other regulations that affect how your estate will be divided some day. It's a good idea to start each year by reviewing your will with your lawyer.

Make sure that it still carries out your wishes and provides for your loved ones. If you have any questions about the financial or investment aspects of your will, the Trust Department of Elliott State Bank will be happy to discuss them with you and answer your questions. Stop in anytime . . . but don't put it off again. Make certain that you review your will and bring it up

DID YOU KNOW:

The Many Faces of LINCOLN

Earliest photograph of Lincoln known to exist - a daguerrectype taken by N. H. Shephard in Springfield, Ill., in 1846.

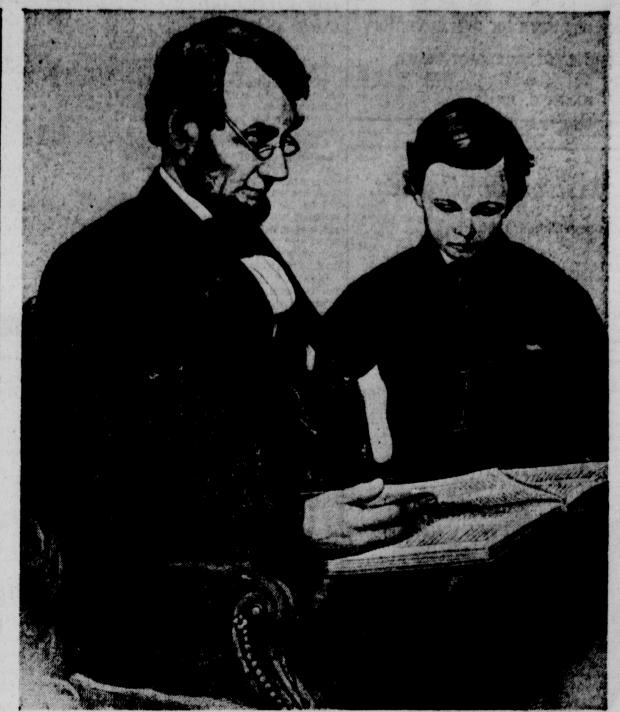

A braham Lincoln was the photographer's delight. The tall, gaunt figure and the sad, serious face of the Emancipator were captured by the early daguerreotype and the early plate camera in hundreds of poses.

The bearded Lincoln is the one most familiar to us, but there were scores taken of the less familiar clean shaven Lincoln, from his earliest known portrait, a daguerreotype taken in 1846 when he was a Congressman until he started growing a beard at the time of his election to the Presidency in the fall of 1860. When his first hirsute portrait appeared on November 26, 1860, a newspaper jibed "old Abe is puttin' on airs."

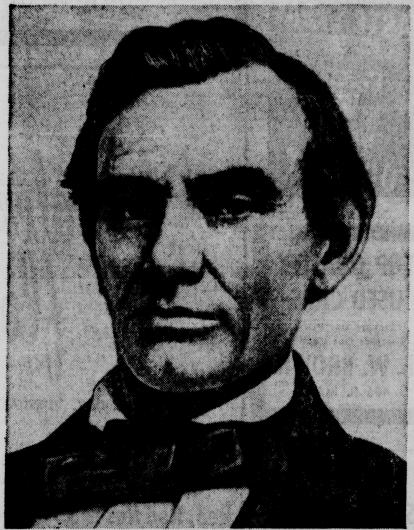

Lincoln really became photograph-conscious after Matthew B. Brady, the famed Civil War photographer, took his picture when he spoke at Cooper Union in New York City in February, 1860 - a speech that some historians say helped win him the Presidential nomination. Lincoln told Brady later that he liked the Cooper Union picture and said in compliment that it was the speech and the photograph which made him President, Brady became one of Lincoln's favorite photographers.

Lincoln liked Brady's work so much that on the day of the inaugural in Washington he walked over to Brady's Photographic Parlor on the corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and 7th Street to have his picture taken, a serious, unsmiling pose. George H. Story, a portrait painter, who was visiting Brady at the time, watched the sitting and said that Lincoln "gave the impression that he was overwhelmed with anxiety, fatigue and care."

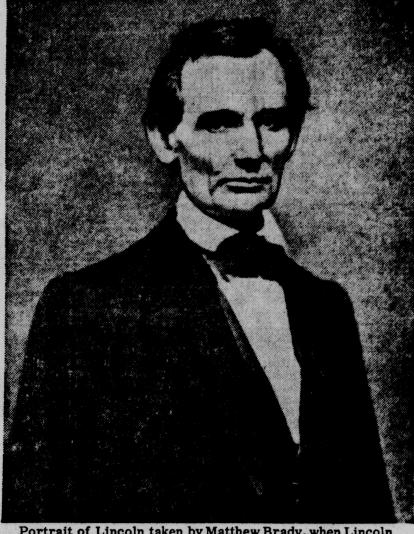

Lincoln's last portrait was taken Palm Sunday, April 9, 1865, five days before he was shot and fatally wounded by John Wilkes Booth in Ford's Theater in Washington. The picture was taken by Alexander Gardner.

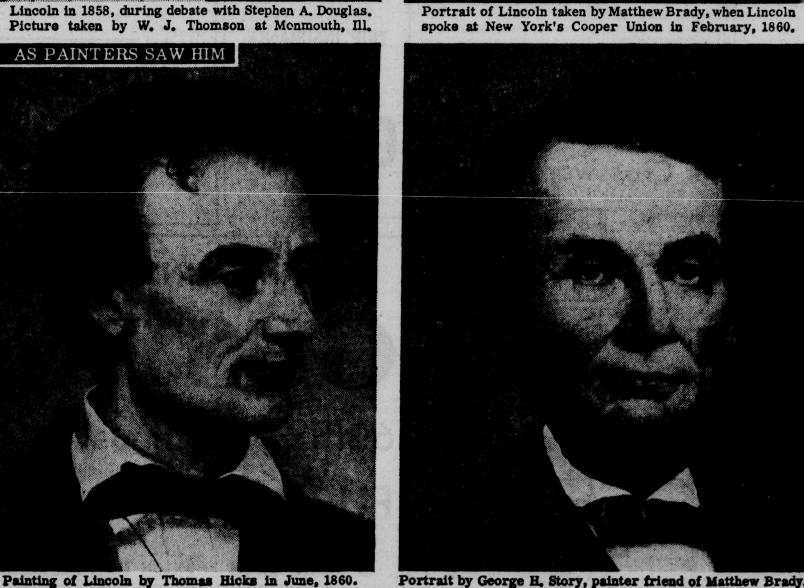

Lincoln and his son, Thomas, posed for this camera study by Matthew Brady, when the boy was only eight years old and affectionately called "Tad" by his parents.

Worries of war years showed in Lincoln's face as he posed for Alexander Gardner April 9, 1865, five days before he was shot and fatally wounded by John Wilkes Booth.

Save for these items and the stocking of the new Minnesota Vikings, the main topic of backstairs discussion at the meeting at the Warwick Hotel was the abortive American League.

George Preston Marshall reiterated what he said during the days of the ill-fated All-American Conference, which left a deficit of $9 million, ending a four-year run in 1949. "If they do well, we'll do better," said Proprietor Marshall of the Washington Redskins. "Those who work hardest and most intelligently will survive."

The older owners, you see, know there is no ready market for even the best of professional football. One has to be created. The customers must be weaned from the colleges.

That is why the American League dropped $31 million in its first year. That and the difference in the economic situation 11 years later. That is why the baby, AL is already having trouble in New York, Denver and Oakland and, according to NFL magnates, why Barron Hilton moved the Los Angeles Chargers to San Diego.

'Hilton knows the American League won't last long and wants to have clear claim to territory when its solvent clubs merge with us," said a veteran NFL owner who requested that he not be quoted because he doesn't want to be charged with throwing cold water. ause he doesn't want to be charged with throwing cold water.
"If the American League owners could stick it out for five or Eight Coach Plan six years they'd make it," he added, "but they won't."

"You can't peddle pro football the way they get the quick buck in baseball. You can't sell even the finest of pro football largely on the early flush of enthusiasm, as they did in Milwaukee, Kansas City, Baltimore, Los Angeles and San Francisco. You just can't take a team into a town like a carnival, pick up the money and get out. "You have to have a team product, superlative football.

"TV has done a lot of things, not the least of which is the wising up of even the uninitiated that a team made up of newspaper clippings hasn't a remote chance with, say the Philadelphia Eagles or Green Bay Packers of 1960."
